

MASTER OF SCIENCE IN COUNSELING AND HUMAN SERVICES

ADVANCE YOUR ABILITY TO HELP PEOPLE OVERCOME CHALLENGES!

Your Master of Science in Counseling and Human Services from Post University covers the essentials for making an impact in service to others. Whether you desire to help individuals, families, or whole communities, your program offers the knowledge and skills counseling professionals use to make a difference.

MASTER OF SCIENCE IN COUNSELING AND HUMAN SERVICES OFFERED ONLINE.

This interdisciplinary program is designed to help you develop a focused understanding of key counseling and human service issues, including prevention, remediation, psychoeducation, diagnosis, assessment, and intervention. You will have the opportunity to develop the skills and build the insights that could help you make an immediate and long-term impact on the well-being of the individuals you serve. The core curriculum for your 39-credit-hour program covers courses in counseling ethics and diversity as well as applied counseling theories and techniques. In addition to two required and skill-building field experiences, you will also have the opportunity to customize your education to your future goals with your choice of one of these concentration options:

- > Clinical Mental Health Counseling
- > Alcohol and Drug Counseling

Disclaimer: While this program is not designed to fulfill licensure requirements in an individual state, it may be used to partially fulfill licensure requirements. Students will need to fulfill additional specific requirements to become credentialed counselors.

For more information, visit:
Post.edu/BHMT